THE DYING MONARCH.

Russian Diplomats Admit That the Czar's End Is Near.

PRINCESS ALIX HURRYING AHEAD

Fears That the Czarowitz's Fiancee May Not Reach Livadia in Time for the Dying Ruler to Witness the Marriage of His Successor.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The last red tape cordon that is most always drawn around the truth by diplomacy was broken today when M DeStaal, the Russian ambassador to Great Britain, admitted to the representative of the Associated Press that telegrams that had been received at the embassy preclude any hope that the sufferer of Yalta would ever again rise from his bed. Baron Mohrenheim, Russian ambassador to France, yesterday furnished the Paris Figaro with the same unwelcome news If this is not sufficient the flight of court officials, the forced and hurried journeys of members of the Russian imperial family across Europe, the alarm of the various courts, and the prayers offered up in churches are irrefutable testimony that the czar is dying

Throughout the day and evening a rain of telegrams has fallen in this city Compiled and sifted these show the following facts: M. Benkendorff, the Russian court chamberlain, has countermanded every order that has been issued in connection with the proposed visit of the czar to Corfu. Many officials have started for Livadia. Princess Alix, the czarowitz's betrothed, will arrive at Yalta, where the czar is sojourning, on Monday. She will be preceded by a few hours by Grand Duke Vladimir. The Grand Duke Alexis arrived in Paris yesterday morning and left last night on the Oriental express, which is due at Yalta on Tuesday.

Around the palace at Yalta there was yesterday placed a triple cordon of police and soldiers in order that no access could be had to the palace from without and that nothing from within could escape to the world unless it first passed through the crucible of censorship So grave are the issues depending upon the czar's life that even the people of Russia are obliged to be satisfied with curt official bulletins so meager as to suggest in every carefully chosen word the theory of the worst.

This is the reading by the bourses, to which the London stock market furnished a prompt echo Russian securities declined from weakness, but it seems that the markets everywhere were checked later by heavy purchases which it is reported were made on account of the Russian treasury in order to prevent a panic Thus the uneasy feeling among financiers found its foil

Dispatches received from St Petersburg report that the city wears its usual aspect, except that crowds of people are in every street grouped about the places where the bulletins are posted Last night the theatres were open as usual, but the audiences were oppressed by a sense of calamity. In Russia this is entirely natural.

A bulletin issued at Livadia at 10 o clock last night says that the czar passed Thursday night almost without sleep His majesty rose yesterday morning as usual His general weakness and the action of his heart are unchanged The oedema of the feet which previously appeared is increased His general condition is unchanged This bulletin is signed by the five doctors in attendance upon his majesty

The churches throughout Russia are holding special services for the recovery of his majesty In the Cathedral of St Isaac, in St Petersburg, the highest officials to the Moujiks joined in solemn petitions to God to save the czar.

In the Russian church in Paris services were also held, and were attended by Grand Duke Michael Nicolaivitch, the staff of the Russian embassy, President Casimir-Perier, Prime Minister Dupuy and a number of other notabilities

Further news from Livadia is anxiously awaited All kinds of conflicting rumors are afloat It is impossible to learn anything in official quarters beyond the bulletins. Several Russian journals have hurriedly sent special correspondents to Livadia. Grave fears are expressed that Princess Alix will arrive at Yalta too late to allow of her marriage to the czarowitz taking place before the czar's death.

What certainly is a remarkable feature of the present crisis is the sympathy developed within the past twenty-four hours in London for the czar, the man and the sufferer In the clubs, omnibusses, trains, everywhere where people come together, there is hardly any subject discussed but that of the czar's illness. The keenness of English sympathy has been deepened by the news that a nerve specialist has been called to the side of the czarina, sister of the Princess of Wales, who is herself threatened by the strain of nursing the dying emperor.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: "I have been in a distressed condition for three years from nervousness, weakness of the stomach, dyspepsia and indigestion until my health was gone. I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely medicine; a few bottles of it have cured me completely. I consider it the grandest medicine in the world." Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Sold by J. E. Mills, Middletown, N. Y.

LEXOW COMMITTEE STARTLED.

A Witness Had "Heard" That They Can be Bought for $70,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—For weeks the members of the Lexow committee have been listening to the stories of the amounts of money paid for "protection" from the proprietors of the soda water fountains of the city up to the French Transatlantic and Cunard steamship lines. But yesterday the senators were startled from their seats in the committee to learn that even the Lexow investigating committee itself had been weighed in the balance by the gamblers green goods men and policy backers of the city

The man who informed the committee from the witness-stand that their reputation for honesty had been reduced to dollars and cents was George W W. Kay, eight years ago a policy backer of this city, but now a reputable business man He testified that he had heard that the committee could be bought for $70,000

"What's that?" inquired Senator Lexow, angrily Senator Bradley whistled softly Senator Cantor only smiled, while Senator Robinson appeared thunderstruck. Mr Goff inquired whether a pool was being made up for the purpose of securing "protection" from the committee, but the witness assured him that he knew nothing about it if such an attempt was being made

There was the usual grind of cases during the day Walter Valentine, of the Stearns Commission company, accused of dealing in bogus stocks, said that he could not find the detailed statements of his business asked for by the committee at the previous session His answers were so unsatisfactory the police were requested to arrest the proprietors of the place, and later in the day Superintendent Byrnes closed it up

Just before the committee adjourned the three children of Mrs. Urchittel were brought into the room by an agent of the Hebrew Sheltering Arms society and restored to their mother There was an affecting scene

A Murderer Lectures Law Breakers.

I hope God will forgive your sins, as I know mine are." He was then pinioned and the black cap adjusted The drop was about seven feet, and death was instantaneous.

Cincinnati's Suspected Train Robber.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 20.—There is no doubt in the minds of police officials here that Morganfield, the man lying in the hospital here with a broken leg, is one of the Aquia Creek train robbers, and he is being closely watched It is believed that some of the stolen money is hid in the vicinity of Cincinnati Evidence is rapidly accumulating against the suspect Officers are on the trail of a companion of the injured man, who separated from him before the accident, and who is believed to have some of the "swag."

"PROMINENTS" INDICTED.

Charged with Violation of the Interstate Commerce Laws.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—The federal grand jury made a final report of the investigation of the rebates alleged to have been paid by the Santa Fe railroad in violation of the interstate commerce law, and returned six indictments against the official of the road and shippers, who, it is claimed received rebates One of the men indicted was Joseph W. Reinhart, ex-president of the company, and until recently one of the receivers of the road, and one of the shippers against whom a true bill was returned was Nelson Morris, the well-known Chicago packer, and the largest cattle shipper in the world.

Mr Reinhart was the general auditor of the Santa Fe at the time the offenses alleged in the indictment were committed He subsequently was made president Joined in the same indictment with Mr Reinhart was John A Hanley, general freight and traffic manager of the road, who resigned from his position about two weeks ago and is not now connected with the company Indictments were also returned against General Manager Jenkins, of the Hammond Beef company, and Isaac Thompson, of Kansas City. There are seven indictments against these five men. The other indictment, it is said, is against a clerk in the employ of the Atchison, who, it is alleged, made out the rebates.

The maximum penalty imposed on a shipper for negotiating illegal rates is a fine of $5 000, or imprisonment not to exceed two years or both, in the discretion of the court

MGR SATOLLI'S ELEVATION.

Confirmation of the Report That He Will Become a Cardinal.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 20.—A clergyman of Cardinal Gibbons' household confirms the report that Mgr Satolli will become a cardinal In addition to the fact that the archbishop will be made a cardinal the most that can be said is that he will probably be named as such at the next consistory, and that the next consistory will convene in Rome most probably in December of this year

Upon his being named as cardinal he will receive the red beretta and be invested with his new dignity in the cathedral at Baltimore He will not be given an Episcopal jurisdiction in this country, as such would be contrary to his position as the delegate of the pope, and in so far as is known now his elevation to the cardinalate will in no manner disturb his official relations with the Vatican touching the administration of his peculiar duties in the United States

The investiture will take place in the cathedral at Baltimore What time will intervene between this ceremony of the investiture and the monsignor's proceeding to Rome to receive the red hat is purely a matter of speculation It may be six months, it may be a year or even two years.

TRAIN ROBBERS AGAIN.

Four Men Easily "Overpower" a Section Gang,

AND "COMPEL" THEM TO ASSIST.

The Amount Secured Variously Estimated at Between $500 and $5,000—The Section Men Unable to Break Open a Big Safe Containing $30,000.

WEATHERFORD Tex., Oct 20.—A west bound passenger train on the Texas and Pacific railroad was held up and robbed by four men near Gordon yesterday. J. B Young of Gordon who came in on the west bound train says that at a point about two miles this side Gordon four men unmasked approached the section gang and forced them to obstruct the road and flag the train as it approached, and when the train was stopped the bandits forced the express messenger to open the door of the express car They also forced the section men to go into the car with a sledge hammer and break the combination of the express safe but their efforts to open the safe were fruitless The messenger's way safe was battered open and what money there was in it was taken by the robbers The amount secured, it is estimated, runs anywhere between $500 and $5,000

Today being pay day at Thurber for the large number of hands that work at the mines there was in the combination safe $50,000 consigned to the Pacific Coal company, which was to pay off the hands. Suspicious characters have been seen for the past month or so in that section, and the express company was prepared for the attack, as they had on the train one of their special combination safes, to which no agent along the route knew the combination The express company had a special man back in the coach who knew the combination to the safe, and who would come forward at stations where he was needed and open the safe. The passengers and mail cars were not molested by the robbers

After the robbery was committed the four robbers walked away towards the mountains, whistling, going in a southern direction The Texas Pacific Coal company have offered $500 reward for the capture of the robbers The train was in charge of Conductor J H McLoud and the express car in charge of Messenger Marshall Gray There were no shots fired during the robbery and it is considered one of the boldest train hold ups recorded in the country for a long time. It is thought the robbers are from the Indian Territory and are now on their way back Posses are out after them, and there is some hope of capturing them.

The train being stopped at such an unusual place, J W Cooper, of Gordon, sprang off on the north side to learn the cause of detention He was greeted by a gruff voice to get back in the train. Believing it to be the joke of an acquaintance he answered with a laugh, but immediately the robbers enforced their command by levelling two long guns at him. Cooper thinks that the robbery could have been prevented if one or two of the passengers had been armed with shotguns and had resisted The point at which the train was stopped is just at the foot of the Clayton mountains about two miles east of the place at which an east bound train was robbed a few years ago

A DANGEROUS CRANK.

He Shoots at a Bank Cashier for Refusing Him a Thousand Dollars.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—A crank entered the Clinton Place bank in Astor Place and demanded $1,000 from Paying Teller Hind. The teller told the crank to wait. As Hind turned away the crank fired a revolver point blank at him and a bullet flew by Hind's head, burying itself in the adjoining woodwork. The crank was seized and turned over to the police The officials of the bank some days ago received notice through the mails from the crank that he would call to collect $1,000

The first of these letters was received last Tuesday In fact, the prisoner had delivered it in person. He walked in and left it at the window without saying a word The letter was in part as follows:

"This certifies that I shall call upon you, the cashier of the Astor Place bank tomorrow and will present a note for $1,000 and demand from you or who shall be at the window of the cashier, and shall force them under penalty of being shot dead instantly without a moment's notice, to hand me the money I do not want to kill no man without first giving him a warning then if he does not heed the warning, then his life shall pay the consequences" He signed himself Charles Freeman

The man did not call on Wednesday, but sent a postal saying he would call the next day Meantime a detective was on duty at the bank. On Thursday came another postal, announcing a day's postponement Yesterday he presented this draft: "Astor Place bank after date promise to pay to the order of God Almighty the sum of $1,000 when presented by Charles Freeman. Penalty if not forfeited—death"

On the back of the draft the following inscription was written: "Notice—The draft of $1,000 will be all that I will claim from one bank"

"Notice—I am authorized by God to draw upon all banks to whatever amount I see fit, and the penalty to refuse me means that I have a right to shoot the person dead that refuses, and by the power of God no man can stay my hand."

This draft, along with the letters, was taken with the prisoner to the Jefferson Market police court. When questioned by Judge Voorhis as to his conduct he answered:

"I acted under the instructions of my God."

"How did you receive your instructions?"

"My instructions were inspirations, and came from God through my heart."

"Do you think you are sane?" asked Judge Voorhis

"I think my mind is superior to any in this room" he answered He was taken to Bellevue for examination

FINANCE AND TRADE.

Leading Business Features Those of Moderate Improvement.

IMPROVEMENT OVER LAST YEAR.

The Improvement, However, Is Slight, and Is Considerably Below the Business of Two Years Ago—Price of Bar Iron Lower Than in England.

NEW YORK, Oct 20.—Bradstreets' review of trade says With few exceptions the leading features of the business situation have been those of continued moderate improvement although the total volume of business so far as indicated by bank clearings throughout the country, will require considerable expansion to compare favorably with corresponding totals two years ago The relatively favorable bank clearings is offset in part by a decline in prices of staples, coffee alone scoring a slight advance

Lard is lower in price, and the prospect for cessation of textile labor difficulties at the east has weakened the print cloth market As serious as any other decrease is that in cotton, the feature of trade south this week being a check to purchases by interior merchants for spring delivery and slower mercantile collections, due to lower prices for cotton

The strength of foreign exchange and gold engagements for the week, aggregating $1 000,000, have disturbed the speculative stock market and checked activity. Current decreases in railroad earnings are ascribed to the effect of the heavy World's fair passenger traffic a year ago.

Textile labor difficulties at New Bedford are reported practically settled, and about one-half of the looms at Fall River are again at work The improvement recently reported by manufacturing jewelers at Providence is maintained, and Buffalo dealers in building materials report more activity Philadelphia's woolen textile industries are more active than a year ago but are not doing the business of two years ago Baltimore jobbers having extended relations south report relatively greatest activity in Virginia and North Carolina

Nearly all the more important business centers west and northwest report moderate activity, but few of them announce new features

At four southern cities general trade is reported to have shown some improvement, Memphis Jacksonville, New Orleans and Galveston, but at Savannah, Augusta, Atlanta and Nashville increased cotton receipts and lower prices have had an unfavorable influence At Charleston, Chattanooga and Birmingham business has been quiet.

R G Dun & Co's review says: Cotton below 6 cents and wheat below 55 cents, each lower than ever since present classifications were known, with exports of gold instead of products at such prices in October are the salient features in business this week Distribution of goods to consumers goes on fairly, with gains at nearly all points in comparison with last year, but not yet at a rate to sustain the present volume of manufacturing production, so that prices weaken a little

The iron and steel business makes a better showing this week, Bessemer pig having stiffened to $10 90 at Pittsburg, and at Chicago and New York further structural and bridge orders have been placed, but bar iron has fallen to 90 cents for common and $1 for steel at Pittsburg, which are prices below those current in Great Britain There is good demand for sheets, and some good bridge contracts are reported.

During the past week the failures have been 253 in the United States, against 341 for the same week last year, and 43 in Canada against 29 last year.

MR. WHITNEY ADMONISHES.

THIS IS NO TIME FOR FACTIONAL QUARRELS.

A REPUBLICAN AMBUSH.

This is a Partisan Fight—A Struggle for Supremacy and New York is the Keystone of the Entire Political Situation.

Roslyn, L. I., Oct. 6, 1894.

Hon. J. W. Hinckley, Chairman of the State Democratic Committee.

My Dear Mr. Hinckley—I have thought over your request that I assume the chairmanship or accept membership of the Campaign Committee, and I cannot reverse the decision, which I expressed to you verbally, that I cannot accept either position. I wish, however, to assure you that this decision does not arise from any indisposition to assist in the campaign. I refused a similar position in the national campaign two years ago, although, as you know, I did not on that account refrain from doing what I could to help the ticket. I desire to remain in the ranks.

I am quite free to admit that if ever I felt inclined to break over the rule I have made for myself it is now. I do not wish to be misunderstood, and, as I have been on other occasions opposed to Governor Hill, I wish to express myself emphatically as feeling a deep interest in the success of the Democratic nominees and desiring to give a hearty and unqualified support to their candidacy.

It seems to me that there never has been a time when Democrats ought to sink personal differences and stand together for the principles and perpetuity of their party as now. In 1892 the Democratic party was intrusted with all branches of the national government for the first time in thirty years.

No Time for Making Faces.

It was not an accidental victory, but won upon principle and for a great national purpose. This is the first election taking place since the party has made a permanent record of its national policy in the legislation of the present Congress. A little reflection must show that the general purposes of the party as a national party are at this very time having their great test before the people. I might criticise as to details, as many do, the manner in which the party has during the last year discharged the trusts committed to it, but at this moment differences among Democrats are not being fought out; it is against the Republican party our common enemy, that we are drawn up. While Democrats are making faces at each other, McKinleyism is being preached on the stump and in the Republican press, and the verdict of the elections will be assumed to have been handed in upon this great national issue. Nothing that Democrats can do will prevent this. This State is the keystone of the entire political situation. Defeat here will mean discouragement for Democrats and encouragement for Republicans throughout the country.

It is useless, of course, to disguise the fact that there is a good deal of dissatisfaction in the party ranks. It is to be said, however, that this is generally true of the Democratic party, and that very fact is one of the chief sources of its strength. Nor would many, I apprehend, deny that there is at the present time some excuse for this dissatisfaction. The management of our State organization is felt by very many to have been narrow and arbitrary. I cannot quarrel with any one for this feeling, and have myself antagonized on many important occasions this policy and assisted candidates in opposition to the party organization.

A Republican Ambush.

But this is a partisan fight—a struggle for party supremacy. The lines were never more closely drawn. If the management of the Democracy is narrow, I do not see that the Republican machinery is any the less so; and if ever a Republican victory would be a machine victory it is now. If the more liberal Republicans had shown a disposition to co-operate on a non-partisan basis with the anti-machine Democrats the situation might be different.

But they have done exactly the reverse. Instead of rising above prejudice in an honest endeavor to perform the work of good citizenship, they have given their undivided attention to the task of reaping partisan advantage from Democratic dissension.

For example, it is not to be questioned that a large body of our citizens are dissatisfied with the conduct of our local affairs by Tammany Hall. They are good citizens, and they have earnestly desired to sink party differences and unite in a non-partisan movement for a broader treatment of our municipal affairs. What has been the attitude of the Republicans regarding this situation? Have they been willing to disregard party lines in the settlement of local issues? If they had and in good faith, they would have said, "This city has nearly two Democratic voters to each Republican, and on any reasonable basis of co-operation in the interest of good citizenship should have a Democrat for Mayor; our right is to see that he is a good man." But no. They want to defeat Tammany Hall, of course, but only on condition that their machine shall take the place of the Tammany machine—so they demand that the great body of Democrats, through whose votes alone reform can be achieved, shall cast their ballots for a Republican, the choice of a Republican machine and a man who, if elected, could be depended upon to place the patronage of his office at the disposal of the Republican party.

Danger From Reapportionment.

Is this good citizenship? Is this the unselfish work of patriotic men, who place the general welfare above the success of an organization and the greed of political plunder? Is it anything else than a determination to make party gain through Democratic dissensions?

Another illustration of the extreme partisanship of the Republican majority is seen in the work of the Constitutional Convention. This temporary wave of Democratic dissension is to be utilized by them to fix upon this State an apportionment which will permanently transfer the State legislative power to the Republicans. For ten years it is not to be changed. As the Republican machine controls absolutely the Republican party in the State, it enacts a practical transfer of the State Legislative functions to this machine.

If, in the presence of an enemy with such singleness of purpose as the Republicans display, we deem this the occasion to gratify personal animosities and work out our antagonisms, Republican supremacy everywhere will certainly ensue.

There are persons, I know, who are inclined to oppose Governor Hill, on the theory that this campaign will have an important bearing upon the candidacy of the party two years hence.

I wish to suggest to such that 1896 may be safely left to take care of itself—1892 did, and 1896 will.

Kind Words for Hill.

Neither Governor Hill nor any one else will be able to secure two-thirds of the votes in the next National Convention unless he stands clearly for the intellectual and moral issues of his party, and has pre-eminent qualifications for the performance of his duty to both people and party.

As to Governor Hill, whatever may be an individual Democrat's opinion of him, the fact is that through no effort of his own he is the standard bearer of the Democratic party in a contest which our opponents have insisted upon making a test of party strength and loyalty.

Individuals count for little in such a struggle and personal feelings should count for less.

A political party advances or recedes as it carries or loses elections.

The result in this State next month is the most important between 1892 and 1896, and any believer in Democratic principles who shall vote against the Democratic ticket will succeed only in dealing a blow at his own convictions. Yours truly, all at once, makes too much of a wash, perhaps. Use Pearline, and it's easy to do a few at a time. Lots of women do this. They take the napkins, towels, handkerchiefs, hosiery, etc., each day as they are cast aside.

W. C. WHITNEY.

All the Clothes,

Soak them in Pearline and water, boil them a few minutes, rinse out—and there they are, perfectly clean.

No bother, no rubbing. When the regular wash-day comes, there isn't much left to do.

Why isn't this just as well as to keep everything and wash in one day? 419

"America's Greatest Men and Women."

AMERICA'S GREATEST MEN AND WOMEN.

MR. WILSON TALKS.

MY Name is Wilson; I do an insurance business on LaSalle street, in Chicago Ill., and I live in Evanston, Ill. Evanston is what was originally a scattering population on a pretty point on Lake Michigan, esteemed years ago far from the city of Chicago, but now one of the varied towns which may go within it by vote of the population.

I am married and have a wife and one child. That child is a boy (I suppose I should feel the same solicitude if it was a girl), and I have a father's natural fancies as to what must be the best thing to give that child the right kind of intelligence, and so divert his course that he may succeed in life. I have studied a great deal upon the subject. My own experience would not be of great value, because I have succeeded only to the limit of the average man and am barely established; still, I own the house and lot upon which I live, and am feeling perfectly safe in meeting the exigencies of the year. I want the boy to take a broader view than I did, to be a bigger man in the world. I have studied how to teach him to do that, and he has done pretty well, as far as the preliminaries go. Now, I have thought over what I should say to him and have sometimes been puzzled. I could not very well tell him what to do. I wanted to tell him what I needed but what I did not learn myself when I was of his age, and what my father did not know how to tell me, or else was not thoughtful enough to do so. I wanted to tell him how to follow the example of those who have succeeded at the present time and under the circumstances which ordinarily affect a young man struggling in this Republic established on this comparatively new world to-day. I wanted to tell him just what he had better do to get along well, and to point out to him what had been done by the people who were successful at the present time.

Of course, the record of the people of any time past would not be of so much value, because circumstances must necessarily have been different when they were alive. I feel confident, though, that if I could learn, some way and somehow, what the people who are so successful to day have done and how they did it, I could give to my boy such advice as would make his own life at least as far removed from failure as justified by the natural ability he may possess.

I looked around for some authority which I might consult in order to give him the facts most essential with this idea of mine in mind, but I could find none until I discovered that a great publishing firm in Chicago had decided to bring out a book giving the photographs of all the people who are prominent in America to-day. Here was what I wanted. The book, as I have learned, is going to be published in 16 parts, 16 pages to each, with a recent photograph on each page of some active leading American man or woman of to-day, while underneath appears the story of that same person's life—the story telling what that person did, and how the ends attained were eventually accomplished. Here was what I wanted; here was what I needed in various ways; here was what I was certainly seeking in order to obtain the information with which to educate my boy and secure for him that knowledge which will give him a source of thought and make him prominent in the world.

I have the first sheets of this work. It is a graphic story of America's Greatest Men and Women, told in each instance on a single page underneath a photograph of recent date, which conveys to the eye an idea of what that person is. To me the photograph tells even more than the suggestive record beneath; and yet it is odd how in each instance the correct story corresponds with the expression upon the face which is reproduced in the portrait above. I do not know how the series will end. I know very little about this new feature of the newspaper people; I know nothing about the publishers and their expectations, but I do know this: that if the series so begun should be continued to its practical, ordinary good sense end—and I don't care whether that will include 200 or 700 of America's Greatest Men and Women, which is the title of the book—I do know this, that for the ordinary, active and alert business man—I will certainly say far more for the student or the literary man, or the politician or the statesman—for all these I will say it will be simply the most valuable and the most remarkable book produced in modern history. The wonder is that some one has not thought of it before. Yet no one seems to have done so since the days of Plutarch. Plutarch knew something. That shrewd old fellow knew that all who would get out of the drift, all who would accomplish great things, wanted to know every detail of the lives of those who had better luck or more courage or a broader brain than their fellows; but I am no authority on these points. I only know that there is produced a second Plutarch's Lives, that its biographies are shrewd, graphic and curt, and written without bias and without prejudice. I only know that there was a Plutarch—God bless the old fellow—and that there is this modern work.

This is the work I am going to give to my boy. I am going to make him read it thoroughly. The work is announced as consisting of 16 Parts, with 16 pages and 16 photographs in each part, and when bound, the whole series will make a great volume of 256 pages, the like of which has never been equaled. It is the story of the personal character of the men and women who are making the nation's history at this particular time. What a work this is! Do you imagine that I would miss it for my boy, or, incidentally, for myself?

Enthusiasm for the Ticket All Along the Line.

Public Printer Benedict, a very close personal friend of President Cleveland, said:

"Mr. Hill has never yet been beaten and it is not likely that he will be a defeated man on election day. I have always been for him, and all good Democrats can be depended upon to make him the next Governor of our State. The nomination of the ticket is all that could be desired. The Administration has no candidate, as it is not the policy of the President to dictate to political conventions as to what action they shall take."

In an interview Hon. John Boyd Thacher said:

"The convention of a political party must ever be wiser than any delegation to that convention. The result at Saratoga has demonstrated this truth. There never was such a spontaneous call for a leader, and no one rejoices more heartily than I in the happy selection which has been made. The public does not yet comprehend the importance of this election. So far as the State is concerned there has not been so important a campaign in many years. If the State goes Republican and the constitutional amendment providing for an apportionment is carried, it will be many another generation before the State of New York will have Democratic representatives in the United States Senate.

"Under the proposed apportionment disfranchising large portions of votes in Democratic communities it will be practically impossible for our party to elect a majority of both houses in the Legislature. Therefore it is of vital importance that the man best adapted for drawing out the full strength of the Democratic party be chosen for this patriotic duty.

"Senator Hill is the Henry of Navarre of the Democratic party. The very sight of his white plume throws consternation into the ranks of the enemy, and wherever on the field of battle that plume waves there the Democratic hosts gather in confidence and hope. I am sure he will lead the party to victory, and any service I can render him will be cheerfully volunteered.

"As for myself, there is not the slightest disappointment in the outcome of the convention, but I feel rather as if a great burden of responsibility had been rolled away from me—a burden which I might not have been able to bear. I think the ticket as a whole is of marvelous strength.

"Mr. Lockwood is one of the most brilliant men in the party, and the burning words of Judge Gaynor on the duties and responsibilities of the Democratic party at this time will furnish one of the battle cries of the campaign."

WHY WOOL HAS GONE UP.

The Manager of the New York Warehouse Tells Strong Facts.

Since the new tariff law, putting wool on the free list, went into effect, the price of wool in both this country and Europe has advanced between 7½ and 10 per cent. The explanation given by the New York wool merchants is that the new tariff is responsible for the increase. Thomas L. Gill, manager of the New York Wool Warehouse Company, said recently:

"Manufacturers have not understood the situation. They are beginning now, however, to appreciate the advantage of having the wools of other countries admitted free. The importers have made arrangements to handle Australian and South American wools direct from the growers through one source in New York. The idea is to bring the foreign wool into direct contact—not competition—with domestic wools, so that the manufacturer can see which of the two is best suited to his wants. The reason why the price has advanced in other countries is that many American buyers are there competing with the trade that the growers formerly controlled. It has increased in this country from natural causes.

"The price of wool in foreign countries is always higher than here, and the grade is higher. Therefore, the free list will not affect the domestic growers, but will give the manufacturers an opportunity to make another grade of goods. The future of the wool trade will be governed by the law of supply and demand."

DR. W. H. MORSE.

Says His Endorsement of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy Was Based Upon Actual Experience.

From the Newark, (N. J.,) Evening News.

"Most certainly," was the emphatic reply of Dr. Morse when asked by a "News" reporter if the words of commendation of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, that recently appeared in the press were veritable.

"I studied medicine," he said, "with Dr. A. N. Allen, for many years the leading practitioner of Massachusetts. Visiting him several years after, he related to me the case of a patient of his who had been cured of stone by solvents. Naturally I inquired into the matter, and he told me. In the town of Dalton, Mass., his patient lived, and that he had literally suffered many things of many physicians,' and they the best of the state. There had been a diversity of opinion as to his ailment, but the doctor had diagnosed chronic inflammation of the kidneys, and his prognosis had been 'incurable.' I had known of this case—a mere wreck of a man, suffering and pessimistic. But now greatly to my surprise, the doctor told me that he was actually cured. He had taken Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and not only had grown saronger and better, but had passed several pieces of stone The Remedy had promoted the passage of the calculi and had acted as solvent. I saw this man a few days later looking well, feeling finely and speaking in the highest terms of the Remedy. I was led to examine it chemically, and to test it therapeutically. My deductions have been such as to corrobarate the clinical experience of many other medical men, that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy will do that which is claimed for it; and I consider it a great discovery."

The great value of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy lies in the fact that it dissolves the excess of uric acid in the blood. Many of the ailments people suffer from—for instance, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness, dyspepsia, kidney, liver and urine troubles, and sickness peculiar to women, come from this cause. Favorite Remedy dissolves this acid, expels it from the system, thus curing the disease. In cases of scrofula, diabetes and Bright's disease it cures where all other treatments have failed.

Hon. Eugene S. Ives is making a vigorous canvass in this Congressional district. He makes a good impression wherever he goes and is a tireless and aggressive campaigner. His nomination has changed entirely the aspect of affairs in the district, and those most familiar with his canvass confidently predict his election.

Ex-Mayor Hugh J. Grant has accepted Tammany's nomination for Mayor in place of Nathan Straus, who declined to run when Senator Hill said no to his ultimatum that he should not allow the Democratic State ticket to be printed on the ballot with the Grace city ticket. The nomination is regarded as a very strong one and has inspired the adherents of Tammany Hall with fresh enthusiasm.

No candidate for office in this State was ever accorded more enthusiastic receptions than Senator Hill. Wherever he goes he is given an ovation and the size of the audiences which flock to hear him is limited only by the capacity of the buildings in which the meetings are held. His addresses are most effective, rising far above the level of ordinary campaign speeches and producing a profound impression on the public mind. They inspire Democrats with new hope and courage and incite them to new efforts in behalf of their party and its candidates.

The Democratic county ticket is growing in favor. Mr. J. C. R. Taylor, the candidate for County Judge, is developing unexpected strength and is receiving assurances of support from many Republicans, who believe that in these hard times $1,500 is salary enough for a county official who never has much to do and that it does not become a man in receipt of such a plum to make faces because it is not twice as large. From the eastern end of the county where Charles Ketcham, the candidate for County Clerk is best known, come advices that he will poll a large Republican vote. Gabriel Tuthill is proving a stronger and more popular candidate than his friends expected when they urged his nomination for Sheriff. He has hosts of friends and acquaintances in all parts of the county who are actively at work in his behalf, and the vote he will receive will be a very large one.

A vote for the Democratic ticket, this fall, is a vote for industrial peace. The tariff question, so far as the Democratic party is concerned, is settled and out of politics. The Democrats in Congress have discharged the duty imposed upon them by the people, have lowered duties and relieved consumers from the odious taxes imposed by the McKinley law for the benefit of a favored few. Business is now on a stable foundation. Industry knows "where it is at." From all quarters comes cheering news of renewed activity and unmistakable prosperity in all industrial enterprises. Should the Republicans win in this State, this fall, the whole agitation would be renewed. The Republican platform so declares and Republican speakers and papers proclaim their party's purpose to restore McKinleyism. A Republican victory would, therefore, mean confusion, turmoil, and disturbance in the business world. Fear would supersede confidence, and timidity check enterprise. The embarassments and discouragements incident to changes in economic policies would repress endeavor and hamper trade. Business of all kinds would be on a doubtful footing until after the election of 1896. The eyes of the whole country are on New York and the only way to assure peace and prosperity to the country's business interests is for the voters of the Empire State to declare by the election of Senator Hill that there shall be no further agitation of the tariff question.

You will elect the Governor of your own political faith, if you have any, that is as far as you are concerned; but there are differences of opinion, and you know that differences of opinion are all that make elections, anyway; but when it comes to a question of clothing, especially winter clothing, that must protect you from a winter's fury there is but one faith, and with no differences of opinion, save as to style and material. You all demand that it shall be good and we trust that we have merited the name of sellers of good clothing. We assert, and boldly, that no better goods were ever sold in Middletown, and none cheaper. Come in and look around, on overcoats, our particular pride, and on suits, compare prices with other stores and you'll find ours the cheapest. You will never fare ill in our hands.

A BOOM FOR MECHANICTOWN.

A Demand for Building Lots by Those Who Want Suburban Homes.

In the campaign of 1892, the ARGUS had great fun with its esteemed contemporary, the Press, because of the latter's sanguine predictions that the big McKinley duty on gloves would bring such abounding prosperity to the Mechanictown glove factory that that little hamlet would grow and develop into a bustling village, a sturdy rival of Middletown.

Mechanictown's boom has come at last, but not through the McKinley duty on gloves but through the building of the electric railroad. There is already a brisk inquiry for real estate in that village. The big yellow house on the corner has been sold by Mr. Miller at a good price, negotiations are pending for the purchase of the lot on the opposite corner and Mr. Dewsnap has had many inquiries for lots. He has had his land on both sides of the road laid out in lots 50x100 feet. His price is $100 a lot. Before the building of the electric road he would have found it difficult to give them away.

INCIDENTS AND HAPPENINGS IN GOSHEN.

George Riddle's Reading—Death of Mrs. Mullenix—Good Detective Work by the Police Results in the Capture of a Petty Burglar.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

—The Music Hall was well filled, last night, to hear Mr. Geo. Riddle read the drama of Lucrezia Borgia. He portrayed the various parts with ease and grace, making each character stand out clearly and vividly. The orchestra which accompanied him was very fine, and the evening's entertainment gave universal satisfaction. The Messiah will be rendered Thursday evening, Dec. 27th, by the vocal society, under whose auspices last night's entertainment was given.

—Mary, the wife of Geo. Mullenix, died, this morning at 1 o'clock, at her home on Murrry avenue, after a lingering illness, aged about forty years. The funeral will be held at St. John's Church, Monday, Oct. 22, at 10 a. m.

—Mrs. Hall, of Ridgefield, and Mrs. Stevens, of Hillburn, are visiting Mrs. Silas Case.

—The opera house was broken into, last Sunday night, and a number of small articles, which W. D. Van Vleet had there ready for his auction, were stolen. Although the theft was discoved Monday, the matter was kept quiet as the police suspected a party, "Reddy" Connors, who was laying very low. They kept "tabs" on him, however, and last night Officer Van Leuvan arrested him at his home. The missing articles were discovered in the house where he had hidden them. When "Reddy" was arraigned for a hearing he acknowledged his guilt and was held to await the action of the Grand Jury. The police deserve credit for tracing the matter up and getting the stolen property back. It consisted of saws and other tools, drawer pulls and similar small articles of no possible use to Connors and not available for conversion into cash.

From a Special Correspondent.

—Master Theodore Berdell will entertain a number of his young friends at his home in this village, Monday afternoon, the occasion being the seventh anniversary of his birthday.

—Miss Eliza Heard is suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism.

—Miss Marie Ireland left, on Thursday, for New York, where she will spend a portion of the winter.

—Miss Mabel Adams, of New York, is visiting her former home at Stony Ford, near this village.

—A literary burglar is something of a novelty, but there was a case on record lately of one who entered a house with the intention of robbing it, but became so interested in reading a volume of English history that he remained until he fell asleep, in which condition he remained until morning. It is possible that while persuing this work he derived some comfort from learning that there had been some very much worse rascals than himself among the highest in that land, or it may simply have been that he was devoted to literary pursuits. At any rate, all he took away with him was the book, with which he walked to the nearest police station and delivered himself up to justice. This is probably one of the greatest reforms that England ever effected. This incident should give a valuable hint to the timid. The women so often quoted in newspapers, who always look under their beds before getting into them, or those who are even afraid to do this, like the dear old body in Cranford, who rolled a ball under hers, knowing that if it came out on the other side, she was safe, might learn a lesson from it. Now all that it will be necessary for those who fear the enterprising burglar to do, is to leave about in a conspicuous spot in the lower story a few choice works of history, fiction, travel, poetry and biography, in order to suit all tastes, and then retire comfortably undisturbed by the thoughts of nocturnal visitors. In this way the tastes of this class of persons may gradually become refined, that is if some of the literature of a couple of centuries ago and considerable of the fiction of the present day be omitted, and our lives and properties be in consequence much safer. THEN AND NOW.

It's funny what a different thing
It is when you are invited
From that is when you could squander wealth.
And fellow humans trusted
For smiles and kindly things, which cost
Them not a single cent,
And a return for what you did
You'd seem to think was meant.

But get there, and you soon will find
That those who drank your wine
When you can only put up beer
Are certain to decline.
But why, when you've no funds for beer,
You offer them your hand
They coldly nod and pass you by
Is hard to understand.

It must be that they're made that way
And can't help acting mean,
And likely that their soul's so small
It never could be seen
As fit, when they are dead and gone,
With toes turned to the daisies,
For any better fare than that
Of everlasting blazes!

SIR DINAR.

A puff of northeast wind shot over the hill, detaching the last December leaf from the sycamore on its summit, and swooped like a wave upon the roofs and chimney stacks below. The smoke ascending through the chimneys was caught midway and driven back with showers of soot and wood ash, discomfiting the townsmen who lingered by their hearths to read the morning paper. The blast, its strength thus broken, fell flat upon the macadam of the main street, scattering its fine dust into fan shaped figures, then died away westward in eddies. Among these eddies the sycamore leaf danced and twirled, now shooting along the ground upon its edge, like a tin disk, now whisked up to the level of the first story windows. A nurse, holding up a 3-year-old child behind the pane, called out, pointing after the leaf:

"Look—there goes Sir Dinar!"

Now the legend of Sir Dinar is as old as the round table, though later touches, easily detected, have been added to it. And this is how they tell it:

Sir Dinar was the first son and comeliest of King Geraint, who had left Arthur's court for his own castle above Portscathoin-Roseland and was buried, when his time came, over the Nare, in his golden boat, with his silver oars beside him. To fill his seat at the round table he sent, in the lad's sixteenth year, this Dinar, who, in two years, was made knight by King Arthur, and in the third was turned an old man before he had achieved a single deed of note, as is to be shown.

For on the fifth day after he was dubbed knight, upon the feast of Pentecost, there began the great quest of the Sangreal, which took Sir Lancelot from the court, Sir Perceval, Sir Bors, Sir Gawaine, Sir Galahad and the flower of Arthur's knights. And because, after their going, it was all sad cheer at Camelot, and heavy, empty days Sir Dinar took two of his best friends aside, both young knights, Sir Galhaltin and Sir Ozanna le Cœur Hardi, and spoke to them of riding from the court by stealth, "for," he said, "we have many days before us, and no villainy upon our conscience, and besides are eager. Who knows, then, but we may achieve this adventure of the Sangreal?" So they listened and imparted it to another, Sir Sentrail, and the four rode forth privily one morning before the dawn and set their faces northward.

Now, the day of their setting out was that next after Christmas and is the feast of Stephen the Martyr, and as they rode through a thick wood it came into Sir Dinar's mind that upon this day it was right to kill any bird that flew in remembrance that, when St. Stephen had all but escaped from the soldiers who guarded him, a small bird had sung in their ears and awakened them. By this the sky was growing white with the morning, but nothing yet clear to the sight, and while they pressed forward under the naked boughs, their horses' hoofs crackling the frozen undergrowth beneath them, Sir Dinar was aware of a bird's wing ruffling ahead and let fly a bolt without warning his companions why he did this, who had forgotten what morning it was and drew rein in their astonishment.

But pressing forward in a minute they came upon a gerfalcon lying, with long lunes hanging about his feet and through his breast the hole that Sir Dinar's bolt had made. While they stooped over this bird the sun got up, and lifting their heads they saw a green glade before them, and in the midst of the glade three pavilions set, each of red sendal, that shone at the first touch of the morning. In the first pavilion slept seven knights, and in the second a score of damsels, but by the door of the third stood a lady, fair and tall, in a robe of samite, who, as they drew near to accost her, inquired of them:

"Which of you four has slain my gerfalcon?"

And when Sir Dinar confessed and began to make his excuse, "Silly knight," said she, "who couldst not guess that my falcon, too, was abroad to avenge the blessed Stephen! Or dost think that it was a hawk, of all birds, that sang a sweet melody in the ears of his guards?"

With that she laughed, as if pacified, and asked of their affairs, and being told that they rode in search of the Sangreal she laughed again, saying:

"Silly knights all, that seek it before you be hearded! For three of you must faint and die on the quest, and you, sir," turning to Sir Dinar, "must many times long to die, yet never reach nearer by a foot."

"Let it be as God will," answered Sir Dinar. "But hast thou any tidings to guide us?"

"I have heard," said she, "that it was seen latest in the land of Gore, beyond Trent water." And with her white finger she pointed down a narrow glade that led to the northwest. So they thanked her and pricked on, never guessing that she herself was King Uriens's wife of Gore, and none other than Queen Morgan le Fay, the famous enchantress, who for loss of her gerfalcon was lightly sending Sir Dinar to his ruin.

So all that day they rode, two and two, in the strait alley that she had pointed out, and by her enchantments she made the winter trees to move with them, serried close on either hand, so that, though the four knights wist nothing of it, they advanced not a furlong for all their haste. But toward nightfall there appeared close ahead a blaze of windows lit and then a tall castle with dim towers soaring up and shaking to the din of minstrelsy. And finding a great company about the doors they lit down from their horses and stepped into the great hall, Sir Dinar leading them. For awhile their eyes were dazed, seeing that sconces flared in every window, and the place was full of knights and damsels brightly clad, and the floor shone. But while they were yet blinking a band of maidens came and unbuckled their arms and cast a shining cloak upon each, which was hardly done when a lady came toward them out of the throng, and though she was truly the Queen Morgan le Fay they knew her not at all, for by her necromancy she had altered her countenance.

"Come, dance," said she, "for in an instant the musicians will begin."

Now the other three knights tarried awhile, being weary, but Sir Dinar stepped forward and caught the hand of a damsel, and she, as she gave it, laughed in his eyes. She was dressed all in scarlet, with scarlet shoes, and the hair lay on her shoulders like burnished gold. As Sir Dinar set his arm around her with a crash the merry band began, and floating out with him into the dance, her red shoes twinkling and her tossed hair shaking spices under his nostrils, she leaned back a little in his arms and laughed again.

It happened that Sir Galhaltin, leaning by the doorway, heard the laugh and saw her feet twinkle like blood red moths, and he called to Sir Dinar. But Sir Dinar heard nothing, nor did any of the dancers turn their heads, though he called again more loudly. Then Sir Sentrail and Sir Ozanna also began to call, fearing they knew not what for their comrade. But the guests still drifted by as they were ghosts, and Sir Dinar, with the red blood showing beneath the down on his cheeks, smiled and whirled with the woman upon his arm.

By and by his breath came shortly, and he would have rested, but she denied him.

"For a moment," he said, "because I have ridden far today."

But she hung the more heavily upon his arm, and still the music went on. And now, gazing upon her, he was frightened, for it seemed she was growing older under his eyes, with deep lines sinking into her face, and the flesh of her neck and bosom shriveling up so that the skin hung loose and gathered in wrinkles. And now he heard the voices of his companions calling about the door and would have cast off the sorceress and run to them. But when he tried, his arm was welded around her waist, nor could he stay his feet.

The three knights now, seeing sweat upon his face, and the looks he cast toward them, would have broken in and freed him, but they, too, were by enchantment held there in the doorway. So, with their eyes starting, they must needs stay there and watch it all, and while they stood the boards became as molten brass under Sir Dinar's feet, and the hag slowly withered in his embrace, and still the music played, and the other dancers cast him never a look as he whirled round and round again. But at length, with never a stay in the music, his partner's feet trailed heavily, and bending forward she shook her white locks clear of her gaunt eyes, and laughed a third time, bringing her lips close to his. And the poison of death was in her lips as she kissed him upon the mouth. With that kiss there was a crash, the lights went out, and the music died away in a wail, and the three knights by the door were caught away suddenly and stunned by a great wind.

Awaking, they found themselves lying in the glade where they had come upon the three red pavilions. Their horses were cropping at the turf beside them, and Sir Dinar's horse stood in sight a little way off. But Sir Dinar himself was deep in the forest, twirling and spinning among the rotten leaves, and on his arm hung a corrupting corpse. For a whole day they sought him and found him not (for he heard nothing of their shouts), and toward evening mounted and rode forward after the Sangreal, on which quest they died, all three, each in his turn.

But Sir Dinar remained and twirled and skipped till the body he held was a skeleton, and still he twirled till it dropped away piecemeal, and yet again till it was but a stain of dust on his ragged sleeve. But before this his hair was white and his face wizened with age.

But on a day a knight in white armor came riding through the forest, leaning somewhat heavily on his saddle bow as he rode, and was aware of an old decrepit man that ran toward him, jigging and capering as if for gladness, yet caught him by the stirrup and looked up with rheumy tears in his eyes.

"In God's name, who art thou?" asked the knight. He, too, was past his youth, but his face shone with a marvelous, strange glory.

"I am young Sir Dinar, that was made a knight of the round table but five days before Pentecost, and I know thee. Thou are Sir Galahad, who shouldst win the Sangreal. Therefore by Christ's power rid me of this enchantment."

"I have not won it yet," Sir Galahad answered, sighing. "Yet, poor comrade, I may do something for thee, though I cannot stay thy dancing."

So he stretched out his hand and touched Sir Dinar, and by his touch Sir Dinar became a withered leaf of the wood. And when mothers see him dancing before the wind they tell this story of him to their children.—A. T. Quiller-Couch.

GETTING EVEN.

A Grocer Who Has the Tables Turned on Him.

The wholesale grocer had himself made from severe for the excellent habit of punctuality. He was always at his desk when the clock struck 8, and he expected his young men to be as prompt as he was.

His favorite clerk was somewhat of an amateur sport, and 8 o'clock in the morning was often too early for his comfort. His charming personality, undoubted business ability and success as a salesman placed him high in the estimation of his employer, who overlooked his slight but frequent digressions from the straight path of punctuality oftener than he did with the other clerks and salesmen.

At last the favorite presumed too far, and the old man was obliged to take him severely to task. "If you are not on time tomorrow," said the wholesale grocer at the end of the lecture, "I will send a cab for you and charge the expense to you."

The next morning was the morning after a prolonged game of penny ante and the favorite clerk did not roll out of bed until 8 o'clock. He had forgotten the lecture and was toying with his second cup of coffee when a cab drove furiously up to the door and the office boy, with a broad grin, jumped out and ran up the steps.

Grabbing another man's hat and forgetting that he still had his slippers on, the young man rushed out of the back door, through the alley and caught a car. The cab came back without him, for he had reached the office first, and the $2 for cab hire was charged up against him.

The success of the new rule passed the wholesale grocer's expectations. The cab has never been sent again for the favorite clerk, and now that rule is posted on the walls of the office.

A few days ago the wholesale grocer overslept himself. His desk was unopened when the clock marked 8. The usual five minutes' grace was given. As the belated grocer was hurrying down his front steps the cab drew up and the office boy stepped to the sidewalk. The clerks had hard work to keep their faces straight when the old man entered the office at 8:30 o'clock. He said nothing, but when the cashier presented him with his weekly personal account he O. K.'d the item to cab hire for being late, $2," with something like a mild grin.—Chicago Record.

Clever.

An actor now famous made his first appearance on the stage in a provincial city. He was young and nervous and failed dismally in the part he was trying to present and soon found himself the target for an assortment of disagreeable bric-a-brac. One of his disgusted auditors flung a cabbage head at him. As it fell on the stage the actor picked it up and stepped forward to the lights. He raised his hand to command silence and pointing to the cabbage head said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I expected to please you with my acting, but I confess I did not expect that any one in the audience would lose his head over it."

He was allowed to proceed without further molestation.—Tit Bits.

He'd swum the River Hudson with one arm behind him tied
And hugged a sweet Chicago girl till she was satisfied,
But when his wife requested him to stay at home all day
And help her at housecleaning he had not one word to say,
But he took one look around him, with a glance that was quite keen
And he skipped next morn at daybreak, and he hasn't since been seen.

Wouldn't Stay Banished—Struck an Officer and Will Spend His Honeymoon in Albany Penitentiary.

—George Wallace, colored, who some time ago, was told by the Recorder to get out of town and remain away for six months, turned up in Police Court again, this morning. He claimed that he had been working for the Traction Company and had to come to this city to get his money. He had $3 left and paid it into the city treasury.

—"Seneca" Brown was fined $3 for intoxication.

—Ben Livingston, who has a criminal record, recently returned to this city, and, on Thursday evening, was married to one of Middletown's dusky belles. Last night he had an encounter with Officer Durham at the corner of East avenue and Fulton street, and the officer received a blow in the mouth from Livingston's fist. Livingston was arrested and locked up. This morning he pleaded not guilty of assault in the third degree, and demanded a jury trial. This plea he afterwards changed to guilty on the advice of his counsel, B. F. Quadsey, Esq., and was sentenced to five months in Albany penitentiary. His bride was in the court room and when sentence was pronounced she wept bitterly.

The stage settings will be unusually fine, the costumes will be brilliant and many colored lights will complete a most beautiful scene. Seven different pictures will be given each night The first night, humorous, sad, serious and odd; the second night, æsthetic and oriental One of the nights, by the aid of black art, the figures will be suspended in mid air. IN BRACING OCTOBER.

Strength Should Return and Languor Go.

No Season is So Good for Building Up the Brain and Body.

Paine's Celery Compound's Work of Mercy in Countless Homes.

The prostrating heat of summer has long since gone.

There is now but one excuse for languor and lack of energy—ill health.

With the return of bracing, vigorous weather the thoroughly well men and women find the prospect of work attractive. Business looks promising. The indolent, unambitious feeling of a few months ago gives place to energy and hard work.

This is, provided one is well.

To the sick man or woman the prospect is doleful. The thousands of persons who worked right through the hot summer, and the many whose vacation, instead of recruiting their strength, has only made increased demands on their tired nerves and brain — these unhappy ones should take advantage of the bracing days and nights to store their bodies with pure, vigorous blood and their nervous system with energy before the cold weather overtakes them in their weak, "run down" condition.

Paine's celery compound should be taken during the month of October. It will build up the tired system wonderfully. Increased appetite and steady gain in weight during the month will show unmistakably the stimulating effect of this remarkable nerve food. To those who know anything of the working and the purpose of the nervous system it is evident that the prompt feeding of the nerves with Paine's celery compound must be followed by a decided gain in health and vigor of the entire system. There is no organ of the body that is not controlled by the nerves.

It is the putting off of attention to the signs of heart weakness that fills the statistics with overwhelming numbers of deaths from "heart failure." Those who at once build up their strength and nourish the feeble nerve-centers with Paine's celery compound, check weakness of that important organ as readily as weakness of any other part of the body. This greatest modern invigorator, discovered by the man whom Dartmouth college is most proud to honor, Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., was welcomed as a more than extraordinary step in advance of anything before at the command of physicians, for curing rheumatism, neuralgia, debility. Countless women, weak, thin, mere bundles of nerves, and discouraged by their inability to gain strength, have been started on the sure road to recovery by Paine's celery compound.

Physicians prescribe it the world over.

Get strong and well with Paine' celery compound.

Here is the experience of Mrs. William McCollom of Trenton, Mo., who says:

"I have had neuralgia for eight or ten years. I began to think that eventually it would cause my death. I would have three or four awful attacks in a month, and all the pain would settle in the base of my brain, and extend down my back, lasting several hours.

"We tried everything that we could think of, but nothing did me any lasting good until my mother came on a visit and told me to try Paine's celery compound, as she was using it for nervous trouble with wonderful success. We both think your compound saved us from going crazy. I only used two bottles of it, but I have not had a return of my old enemy since.

"One thing is certain, and that is the doctors could not do anything for me. Some told me it was caused by nervous trouble, some said it was female trouble, some said one thing, some said another, but thanks to your wonderful compound, I am free once more. I have often thought that I would write and tell you what a relief it is to be free from pain but I neglected it from time to time. You may believe that I shall always speak a kind word for Paine's celery compound."

—To day is the last day of registration.

CAPT. TOTTEN'S "DAZZLE."

A Good Dog. That Knew More Than Some People, Gone to the Happy Hunting Grounds

Some one has said, most likely a man, but possibly a woman, that if all dogs were to be excluded from Heaven and room was to be made there for some of the men and women whom he, or she, had encountered, the place celestial would be no such abode of bliss as it is pictured.

Well, there are few of us but have met with dogs that were so good, so loveable, so wise, as to be deserving of immortality. Such a dog was "Cap." Totten's "Dazzle," who, peace to his remains, the Captain, with tender and loving hands recently put beneath the sod.

"Dazzle" was most royally descended. His mother, Irish, his father, British, had in their veins the blood of the Kings and Queens of the Kennel. A famous hunter was "Dazzle,"—no dog was ever more staunch and true in field or brush, and many a woodcock, partridge and quail did he bring to the Captain's pot.

Lots of "humans" don't know half as much as did "Dazzle." To be sure he couldn't talk, but he would have had speech if ever speech had come to a dog. His manners and his habits were the best; his affections were boundless, barring that he drew the line on strange cats.

Dazzle was wiser than an owl. He always knew when the Captain was going to New York, by his change of clothing, and never did the Captain return but Dazzle was at the train to greet him. One could, however, take up an entire column of the ARGUS with the story of this dog's wisdom and virtues, and then leave them only half told. One thing more remains, however, to be said in justice to Dazzle, which is that he always wiped his feet on the door mat before he entered the house, to this the Captain's good wife, will, doubtless, bear testimony.
